Today, we can enjoy eating many kinds of vegetables. We know they are important for our health. Do you know some of them were not seen as food a long time ago?

In the 15th and 16th century, people in Europe went to South America and took back many kinds of food. Rich people in Europe started to grow tomatoes and potatoes in their gardens, but they didn't eat them. They just enjoyed looking at the flowers.

However, some poor people in Italy stole tomatoes and started eating them in the 17th century because they didn't have enough food. They improved tomatoes to make them delicious. Tomatoes became popular in the 18th century.

Potatoes have poison. Some people got sick after eating potatoes. People in Europe thought they were food for their sheep and pigs and would not eat them for a long time. However, a few people tried to introduce potatoes as food because they grew well in almost any place. They explained that many times and tried many different ways. In the 18th century, potatoes became popular in Europe. They saved a lot of hungry people.

Like this, we now eat vegetables that were not seen as food before. Some scientists say that there will not be enough food in the future. We need to find new food.
